

Dr. Kristina L Wanyonyi (Kenya)

Kristina is a Dentist trained at the University of Nairobi, Kenya. She holds a Master degree in Public Health from the University of Dundee (UK). She holds a DDPH from the Royal College of Surgeons of England and Associate Fellowship with the Higher Education Academy.

She is currently based in the UK working towards a PhD at Kings College London. Her doctoral research revolves around the optimisation of dental health service delivery.

Kristina has practiced as a clinician in rural and urban informal settlements in Kenya between 2006 and 2008; experiencing work in areas of high need with minimal service capacity.

In the UK, she has worked at the Dental Health Services & Research Unit in Scotland, where she researched effective methods of communication of health messages; an area in which she has published.

She is actively passionate about translation of research into practice globally, especially within the area of tackling health inequalities.

She is involved with NGO's and the establishment of networks which chart ways to improve health access for underserved groups.
